Series on the Mass, Part 32

This last prayer of the offertory, the Suscipe Sancta Trinitas, is a summary of the Mass, for the Mass is a sacrifice that the whole Trinity will accept. The prayers of the Mass are generally addressed to the Father and conclude with the precision that the prayers are through the Son and with the Holy Spirit. Therefore the whole Trinity is present in the thought of the Church when it prays; nevertheless, it is good that certain prayers be addressed to the Trinity as a whole. Thus the unity and equality of the three persons of the Most Holy Trinity is taught.

This prayer mentions the passion, resurrection and ascension of our Lord. Jesus, who will be present on the altar, is the one who suffered and died on the cross and then rose from the dead to ascend into Heaven. The redemptive act of our Lord is made present on the altar at each Mass, though now in a sacramental way. The death of our Lord is signified by the separation of the Blood from the Body with the dual consecration. The resurrection is signified by the commingling of the particle of the consecrated host with the Precious Blood in the chalice just prior to the priest receiving communion.

This prayer also brings in the communion of the saints when it mentions that the sacrifice is offered in the honor of the Blessed Virgin Mary and the saints. The Mass is always offered to God alone, but we can also thank Him for the wonders He accomplished in the Virgin Mary and all the saints. The saints fully realized in their lives the plan God had for them and therefore, they also show forth the splendor of His glory. In this list of the saints there is the mention of et istorum ("and these saints"), referring to the relics of the saints in the sepulcher of the altar. In the Traditional Liturgy, it is required that a relic of a martyr be placed in the altar stone when it is consecrated. This goes back to the ancient practice of celebrating Mass on the tombs of the martyrs in the catacombs during the persecution of the Church.

Sincerely in Christ,

Rev. Charles Van Vliet, FSSP

Welcome to Regina Caeli Parish.

We appreciate the effort it takes to find and attend the Traditional Latin Mass. May God reward you.

We ask both men and women to respect modesty. The way we dress says something about our values and influences, how we behave and feel. God and His House are important. In His House, we should express this importance by our actions, our reverence, our silence, and most importantly, by the way we dress.
